

Jacqlin Spring

You gain strength, courage and confidence by every experience in which you really stop to look fear in the face. You must do the thing you think you cannot do."

Quote: Eleanor Roosevelt

Jacqlin Spring

A singer of soft, smooth and loving Jazz. Self-aware, mysterious, independent and untouchable.

Jacqlin has used all her experiences for the creation of this album: the good and the bad. She has risen to the challenge and has continued to develop against the tide, always keeping the wise words of Eleanor Roosevelt in the back of her mind.

Home at Last

Her album Home at Last, is a long cherished dream come true. Being an artist is a lifelong quest, a road that never ends.

Home at last has become an album full of beautiful stories, love, warmth and affection. A search for who you are and where you belong.

Feeling at home, wherever you are, lies within yourself. Finally at home in your own body. Let yourself be touched by Home at Last as if you are being caressed by a loving hand. Which reminds you, that you can feel at home by yourself. That you too may learn your whole life and do things that make you happy.

The album consists of self-written songs complemented with covers, to make the album come to a nice relaxed whole. Smooth and Jazzy, with the occasional cheerful poppy note. An album to relax with: Ideal for a dinner with friends or for a romantic moment in front of the fireplace, with a glass of whiskey and a cigarette.

An album to feel at home, wherever you are.
